

TrueRelic Authentication Report
		12/13/2022
All Guitars	Original yes/no	Comments (if "no")
Headstock	Yes
Tuners	No	Original 56 reissue comes with tuner-bushings. This one has tuner nuts - maybe have been replaced at a certain time or made at the custom shop.
Nut		Not enough info (pics not sufficient)
Fretboard	Yes
Frets	Yes
Body	Yes
Bridge	Yes *	pics not sufficient - need photo of backside of disassembled bridge
Tailpiece	Yes *	pics not sufficient - need photo of backside of disassembled tailpiece
Saddle (acoustic)
Bridge pins (acoustic)
Serial Number	No *	6 0577 - Number usually printed in black - maybe printed due to dark paint on headstock. Also - Number printed exceptionally low and too close to the tuners
Papers		No Pic
Electric/Bass	Original yes/no	Comments (if "no")
Pickups	Yes *	Original 56 reissues come with P-90. However, it looks like these humbuckers are not a replacement but originals.
Potentiometer	Yes
Pickup selector switch		No Pic
Input jack		No Pic
Truss rod cavity		No Pic
Other
Knob pointers		Missing "Finger cutters" (knob pointers)
Summary
Serial number indices a Gibson Les Paul Delux from 2000 or 2010 or 2020. Generic plastic switchplate cover indicates production prior to 2011/2012. There are too many odd elements as mentioned in the report. Bottom line - insufficient data to determine the guitar authenticity with a high degree of certainty.
Disclaimer: When you place your order with TrueRelic, you are hiring us to evaluate the overall condition of the designated guitar, based on what our inspectors can subjectively observe electronically. TrueRelic inspectors do not physically see or hold the guitar. The TrueRelic service is a virtual inspection of all reasonably accessible items only, and some problems may not be observable during the inspection. The TrueRelic inspector is solely relying on videos, images, and written electronic information. As some guitar defects and issues can only be found by physically inspecting the guitar, we do recommend to complement the TrueRelic inspection with a physical one by a local luthier.		